Q: What can feedback do for a writer?
Hint: look at the example below!

ROUGH DRAFT

Internet is dangerous. We can know where you are and your privacy with internet. This is a serious trouble. Because someone can know your information. Now, many people in the word can use internet and it can connect with the world people with mobile phone.

FEEDBACK

The internet is dangerous because we can know where you are and your privacy with the internet. This is a serious problem./This causes serious trouble. Because someone can know your information. Now, mMany people in the world are using the internet now, and it can connect with the world people with mobile phones.

FINAL DRAFT

Many people in the world are using the internet, and there are many different ways to connect to it. For example, people all over the world can use the internet with mobile phones. However, your location and your privacy can be shared easily. This is a serious problem because anyone can know your information. For this reason, the internet can be dangerous.

A: Feedback helped this writer to…
1) Reorganize the ideas so that they lead to the main point.
2) Clarify causes and effects (internet use on mobile phones causes users' location to be known).
3) Connect sentences using words like because.
4) Get rid of unnecessary words like we and the world.
5) Choose more natural expressions.
   - ✕　is a serious trouble
   - ○　is a serious problem
   - ○　causes serious trouble

Writing involves lots of rewriting. Feedback can be helpful at any point in this process!
